The value of the IPA for your association

The IPA is the voice of world publishing. We promote and protect copyright, freedom to publish, literacy and accessibility around the world. We advocate for the social, cultural, financial and political benefits of a free, competitive publishing ecosystem in the knowledge-based economy of the future. In Geneva, we speak for publishers at the World Intellectual Property Association, the World Trade Association, at the UN Human Rights Council and other supranational bodies. We also intervene at regional and national levels when the common values of publishers are threatened, especially copyright and freedom to publish. A key benefit of IPA membership is also access to and solidarity with the collective expertise of our members.

14. How can the IPA best support your Association in achieving its objectives from 1 (require no support) to 5 (require significant support).

- International lobbying in the field of copyright at WIPO and other fora
- Assistance in lobbying for a national legal framework for copyright protection and enforcement
- Support for national campaigns to highlight the importance of intellectual property rights
- International lobbying in the field of freedom to publish
- Assistance in lobbying your national government on issues related to freedom to publish
- Assistance in addressing issues related to book piracy
- Facilitating access to expertise and assistance to enhance national publishing industry policies
- Support for your association's activities to promote literacy
- Production of market data and intelligence on the international publishing market
- Support in developing market data and intelligence on your national publishing market
- Other (Please specify):
